Special Counsel, Finlaysons Lawyers

Kyra is an environment, planning, carbon and resources lawyer with degrees in Law and Chemical Engineering (with First Class Honours) from the University of Adelaide. Kyra joined Finlaysons in January 2003 and is now head of Finlaysons' Environment, Climate Change and Planning practice.

Kyra works extensively with the mining, oil and gas, and energy sectors, with a focus on project approvals and environmental impact assessments, environmental compliance, incident response, licensing, regulator engagement, water access, carbon pricing, carbon policy, due diligence and governance.

Kyra also has significant experience working within a major resources company on extended secondments as a specialist in-house counsel.

"I am continuously inspired by the ingenuity of the people working within the resources industry, and am proud and honoured to play a part in bringing their big ideas to fruition."
